Delicious Cereal Corrected
His Condition

Here is Mr. Johnson's letter: "I have been eating it for two weeks, and my constipation has gone, and I was constipated for 25 years or more. Hoping this may help some one to better health. I am a new friend to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN."—Mr. J. B. Johnson, Lake Charles, La.

Johnson's letter is one of millions find Kellogg's ALL-BRAN corrects constipation* satisfactorily. It supplies the "bulk" missing in the average American the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is mild and effective. It absorbs moisture, gently exercises and cleanses intestines. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

It is more sensible to use this cereal food instead of taking patent medicines. Just eat two table-spoons daily. If not relieved, consult your doctor.

As a cereal, with milk or cream or cook into muffins, breads, etc., sold by all grocers. Made in Kellogg in Battle Creek.

BOYS GIVEN LECTURES. RELEASED BY GRAHAM

Lloyd Crosby, 21, Walnut-st., and Hugh Montgomery, 18, Half-ave., were lectured and released by Mayor W. J. Graham Friday morning following their arrest for being intoxicated and disorderly.

Police Chief William McCrady said the youths were making remarks to women on a downtown street. Crosby furnished $5 bond to appear before the mayor. Montgomery spent the night in jail.

Francisco where he was captured yesterday.

He is under indictment on charges of kidnaping and extortion, with bail set at $100,000 on each charge.

Approximately $125,000 of the $200,000 ransom collected from the Weyerhaeuser family has been recovered. J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the department of justice in Washington, reported federal agents found $7,300 on Mahan when he was captured.

San Francisco authorities reported another $13,000 was found in an automobile parked near the spot of Mahan's capture.

Agents recovered $15,155 when they seized a car in Butte, Mont. June 9, 1935, when Mahan abandoned his machine to escape arrest. On the same day Herman Metz Waley and his wife, Margaret, convicted accomplices of Mahan in the kidnaping, were arrested in Salt Lake City.

Mrs. Waley led federal agents to a $90,000 cache of the ransom money. Both the Waleys were convicted on kidnaping and extortion charges.

DAVEY ISSUES MOTHERS' DAY PROCLAMATION

This is the time of the year when our thoughts turn most intimately to the Creator of all things. Everywhere about us we see the manifestation of His great power—the budding and leafing of the trees, the reawakening of the soil, the renaissance of all life and nature.

It is most appropriate, then, that we pause at this particular time to contemplate God's greatest creation, Motherhood, through which mankind is perpetuated that it may enjoy the benefits and beauties which nature brings forth at this season of every year.

Too often we are prone to forget the importance of Motherhood as we pursue our material daily life. It is well, in this case, that we set aside one day of the year on which we pay homage and devotion at this sacred shrine; one day on which we enunciate that reverence and respect for Motherhood which we constantly hold, but, sometimes too infrequently express.

Therefore, I, Martin L. Davey, Governor of Ohio, by virtue of the authority vested in me, and in accordance with the established custom, do hereby proclaim Sunday, May 10, 1936, as Mother's Day in the State of Ohio, and urge proper observation of the occasion in our homes, churches, public and private institutions. Let the day be one of rejoicing, and the renewal of filial devotion, for those whose Mothers are still in the world of the living. For those whose Mothers have passed beyond, let the day be one of loving remembrance and tender respect.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of Ohio to be hereunto affixed, at Columbus, this Fourth Day of May, in the Year of Our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty Six.

MARTIN L. DAVEY
Governor

Lutheran Men Hear City Officials

The first May session of Trinity Lutheran brotherhood held Thursday evening in the parish house in charge of President Luther Bower was opened by the entire group singing "Beautiful Savior," after which Dr. G. J. Troutman read the 6th chapter of 2nd Corinthians, and offered prayer. All joined in singing the inspiring hymn, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee."
During the business session, Mr. Bower, who with Gladden Troutman, were delegates to the Central Ohio Association of Lutheran Brotherhoods, held last Sunday in Westerville, made a report of the meeting.
The action of the executive committee in appointing Harry Barthelme, Carl C. Leist and Luther Bower to represent the brotherhood in the State Highway Safety control drive sponsored by the American Legion, was confirmed by a unanimous vote.
As has been the custom for many years, the Brotherhood donated $10 to the Capital University Revolving Fund, which fund is used in making short loans to students who may need financial help in completing their work at the university.
Rev. G. L. Troutman then gave a talk on the Bible School that has been conducted for the last 10 years, reciting among many other interesting things that the enrollment last year was 199, children with 90 being perfect in attendance during the whole term; that all teachers have had their required normal work for service in the public schools and that all are giving their time and much effort without cost. The Brotherhood then took action to sponsor the school as has been their custom for years, and voted financial aid necessary.
The program that followed pertained to the City of Cincinnati. The speaker being Mayor W. J. Graham, President of Council J. C. Goeller, Fireman Clinton Strawser and Police Chief William McCrady.
The next session will be held on Thursday evening, May 21, with Dr. G. J. Troutman in charge of the program. The general theme will be "What I Like and Dislike About My Own Business."
Howard Ater will have charge of the music and Charles L. Mack will head the committee on lunch.

OPEN LETTERS

TO CITY OFFICIALS

AUTHORITIES: You have made an effort to correct a serious traffic situation at Pickaway and Watt-sts. But it seems you have overdone it. STOP signs have been placed on all FOUR corners, and since that has taken place few, if any, motorists stop. Other times persons living in the vicinity of the corner have seen cars pull up from two sides at one time and both drivers stop. Then neither knew whether to proceed.

CIRCUITEER

TO COUNTY MOTORISTS

FRRIENDS: Many of you travel rough roads every day. Scores of you realize the dangers existing in too fast travel on the county highways in the condition many of them now are. But there are some who cannot seem to learn that fast driving over rough roads is dangerous to life and limb. Accidents result because these hard-driving autoists fail to understand they are not on racetracks. Wrecks, possibly fatal, are inevitable unless drivers use good judgment as to their speed or, what is the same, drive always at a speed that is reasonable and consistent with traffic and road conditions. In other words, DO NOT DRIVE 80 MILES AN HOUR ON A 40-MILE AN HOUR HIGHWAY.

TO COUNTY FARMERS

RESIDENTS: Nearly all of you are interested in the rural electrification program being supported by the government. You certainly should be because it means many luxuries to most of you that you do not enjoy now. It seems, however, that speedy action is necessary or Pickaway-co will remain out in the cold. Many other Ohio counties that started organization plans much later than did Pickaway, and undoubtedly have fewer persons signed up for service, have been incorporated and are ready for the word "Go". A list of organizations announced this week does not include Pickaway. It is the hope of THE CIRCUITEER that immediate steps are taken to complete the organization necessary before a loan and grant can be obtained.

CIRCUITEER

TO HIGHWAY COMMITTEE

OFFICERS: An organization was affected this week to promote safety on the highways of Pickaway-co. This movement is a timely and necessary one and should be supported enthusiastically in Circleville and Pickaway-co. Its success is up to every member of the committee. The fact that

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

WHAT'S WRONG with the stock market? That is the question Wall Street is asking itself. (It never knows the answers.) It has been held that stocks would continue rising "gradually." The rally was supposed to be the ones that were to go through the top next. Instead, they dropped.

A dozen answers are given, none satisfactory, for Wall Street looks at "long-pull" economic conclusions. Annual, President Roosevelt is the major blame. (That is an easy solution.) It is that he sounds as if he were "breathing spell." He is trying to put through another "short" hours and have men employed.

One financial writer remarks even may be a bull point, would mean increased power. Then, an unbalanced budget taxes caused capital. A financial writer, however, that an unbalanced budget is an unbalanced budget, and should be due rising country prices—"until the bubble burst," at least. Fear of "radical" legislation then was offered as an excuse for the hesitancy of stocks.

But Washington commentators believe that congress will adjourn in June with comparatively little legislation, except the new tax bill. Ah, the tax bill that's it! It is the latest word is that the tax bill has been modified and softened so much that the revenue it will bring in will hardly affect business at all, even though it may be painful.

Then, there is the war scare and a fear that France will go off the gold standard and add to the world economic chaos. But "private advisers" indicate no war.

Well, what IS wrong? Wall Street can't answer. Business is good. But something is wrong. Stock exchange firms are laying off clerks.

Radicals have an answer—but we shall not quote them. Liberals, too, have an answer. They say, unless industry gives a broader spread to its earnings, it simply will be moving in a circle, with the momentum growing less the organization is complete does not mean that you should stop there. You must develop and support firmly your educational program; you must instill in the minds of every person in your community the need for more care in driving on the public thoroughfares. On your shoulders rests the responsibility of seeing that the campaign is a success.

TO FRIENDS OF VETERANS

FOLK: May 23 is a significant date since two Circleville organizations, the American Legion auxiliary and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will sell poppies on the streets of the city. These poppies are made by disabled veterans and the money gained from the sale of the tiny flowers does much good. The project deserves unanimous support in our city. Mayor Graham is expected to issue a proclamation within a few days setting aside May 23 as "Poppy Day" in Circleville, and urging all to do their part.

TO HIGHWAY OFFICIALS

ENGINEERS: That stretch of Route 22, just west of Williamsport, is about the worst of any main highway in Pickaway-co. The road into the village from the east is splendid, except for a few rough spots, and a large part of the remainder of the pavement between the village and Circleville is good. After passing Williamsport, travelers are apt to get an unfavorable impression of Pickaway-co and its highways in general because of the condition of this road. Something should be done to right the condition.

TO HOUSEWIVES

LADIES: Most of you do too much work at this time of the year, and it is your fault. Why do you not use a fly swatter, or carpet beater, or even a broom to rouse your husband off the davenport and away from his evening newspaper long enough to mow the lawn, or clean a little wallpaper, or do a little spading. Nearly all of you are too lenient with friend hubby these pleasant evenings. He has little to do at the office or at the factory these bright sunny days, and a little spurring on your part might make him of a little use about the house.

TO ALL VOTERS

CITIZENS: Tuesday is primary election day. All of you know that, and all of you who have any interest in the successful government of our county, state and nation will visit the polls between 6:30 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. CHAPTER 41

McMANUS WAS already at the phone calling Keyes to tell him of the steel needle found in Van Every's door.

I felt a touch on my arm. "Maughan, you really think this needle might be meant as a warning for someone in the house?" Van Every asked.

"That's what I think. We can waste no time. I'll dash down and see if Joyce is all right. You stay close to McManus until he gets his men here. I'll call you from the library."

"I'd rather go with you to see—"

"You stay here. It isn't safe for you to go out. Think of Miss Randall, and be careful how you look out the windows. I'll call you from the library."

"But, you!" he insisted. "If it's not safe for me, it's not safe for you!"

"I can't see why anyone should want to kill me, Van Every." I tried to speak bravely, but I was really not so confident as I appeared. There seemed no reason for the deaths of Margalo and Laura Randall. I would be an easy target.

Jerked up my hat and overcoat. I was out of the house like a streak. I must see her, be sure she was all right. For all I knew she might be dead by now. I stumbled down the street. Why hadn't I thought of asking Soon to call a taxi? It would have been quicker. However, just as I was leaving myself I saw one cruising around. Looking quickly at the driver—I don't know why, but I did—I jumped in. His face was honest, and he seemed glad of a passenger. I was careful, however, to close all the windows, even the slide to the front seat. I had no wish to be caught as Miss Randall was. On no condition would I raise a window.

The driver evidently knew what I meant when I said to hurry. He flew through the streets, and before I realized I was in front of Gribbel's clothing store. I got out. I saw no one who could be suspicious in any way. Women hurrying to the door of the big department store. Women everywhere, all intent on their own particular errands.

With a sigh I alighted, and paid my fare. I didn't take the elevator, as I was sure I could make better time on the stairs. I plowed through like a truck horse. All the way down I murmured apologies, but nevertheless kept up my breakneck speed. The drug-counter at last. Joyce—I couldn't see her. My heart sank. Other clerks, but no Joyce. I thought the worst for a moment, then hurried to the other side. My hands were clammy as I looked quickly from one clerk to the other. Little shivers of foreboding crept up and down my spine. Joyce, if I only could see her, know she was there, safe.

Then relief. There she was, waiting on a customer. Smiling a little, I leaned against the counter, weakly. I had expected her to be dead—withered in her head. I don't know why.

Standing there recovering my composure, I waited for her customer to go. She was a tall, well-dressed woman, too well dressed, I thought, to be buying in the basement of Gribbel's. Too well dressed to patronize that sort of store at all. She belonged on Fifth Avenue, in the smart shops.

There was something vaguely familiar about the tall figure. I stared rudely, hoping to see her face. When she turned slightly to pick up another jar of cream from the counter, I saw her face. It was Edith Bryce. What was she doing here talking to Joyce? The warning! Could she be—

Joyce was waiting on her cheerfully. I crowded closer to the counter, watching Mrs. Bryce intently. She was picking up her bag came to me brightly that she had the peculiar gun which carried silent death—the gun that shot those strong lethal needles!

Joyce turned her back to the counter and reached on the shelves for something. It was then that I knocked my elbow against Mrs. Bryce and muttered an apology. In a second I was stooping to regain her bag which had fallen to the floor with a bang. Heavy—it might easily contain a gun! My fingers encountered something hard in the brief time I held the bag before returning it to the woman. She looked at me coldly, then recognizing me, smiled graciously.

"I'm very sorry," I said. "These department stores are so crowded."

But Edith Bryce didn't wait for more. She hurried away and when Joyce turned around, another jar of cream in her hand, she saw her customer standing down the aisle.

"Why—" she said, looking at the array of jars on the counter, jars she had evidently brought out one by one for Mrs. Bryce.

"Hello," I smiled. I must reassure Joyce. She mustn't think she was in danger.

"Hello, Gary," it was the first time she had called me Gary. Always before I had been "Mr. Maughan."

"Funniest customer I had—now why did she go off like that?"

"Why was she funny?"

"Oh, I don't know. She sort of hung around until I was at leisure. I noticed her, of course, because she was so well dressed; unusual for the basement. I was waiting on someone else when I first saw her. Then when I finished with the woman I was waiting on, she came up quickly before I had time to give this other woman her package, and said she wanted to look at some goods. I've brought out all the cream in the place, and now she goes off without buying anything!" The girl giggled. "You'll have to buy something again, Gary. I can't stand here and talk to you—"

I picked up one of the jars on the counter, then another and another. "Tell me more about this woman. Have you ever seen her before?"

Joyce said she had not. "Never, Joyce?"

"Never, I'm sure."

My thoughts toward Mrs. Bryce at that moment were none too friendly. I was certain that if I hadn't come along when I did something would have happened. Now, what to do about Joyce? She couldn't remain here any longer. That was certain. The sooner I got her out of the store, the better. She made too good a target, standing there back of the counter.

How had Mrs. Bryce found out she was at Gribbel's? Probably searched the library for her, and when she couldn't find her there—that was unreasonable, though, unless she had had her followed. That was it.

"I have you noticed anyone follow you yesterday and today?"

"No, why?"

"I can't tell you why, Joyce, but you must leave here, now, with me. Right away." The more I thought about Mrs. Bryce's purse, the more convinced I was that it was too heavy for a woman to carry around. It had landed on the floor with such a bang. Of course, I had purposely knocked it from her hands. A fairly sized imported beaded bag, with a gold top, studded with jewels, and a gold chain handle. Big enough for a revolver. It was fringed in gold beads.

"That's silly, Gary," Joyce protested. "I can't leave here, I'm perfectly happy and not nearly so tired today! I won't go. You're getting as bad as Uncle."

"It's not silly, and you must go. I didn't want to tell you, Joyce, but now I must. That woman—I think meant to do you some harm. She may come back, or send someone else. You can't be here if she does come back!"

"Harm? What do you mean?"

"I mean harm. Danger. I can't tell you, Joyce!" I struggled for words.

"You mean, I might be murdered?" Her eyes looked into mine coolly. Eyes that were not afraid. Blue, deep, lovely eyes. The hands that arranged the jars again on the counter were quite steady.

"I mean just that. I hated to make it so plain."

"Did that woman murder Margalo Younger and Randall?" I had known she would ask that question, but I was unprepared to answer. "I don't know. There is no reason that I can see why she should be down here in the basement, why she should buy her cosmetics in a basement store. Still less reason why she should wait for you, unless, Joyce, she means you some harm!"

"It's all very queer, Gary. Do you know her?"

"Yes, I've met her."

"You think that's why she went away so suddenly when I had my back turned?"

"I'm sure of it."

"Well, anyway, I'm not going to leave. So there!" Joyce's smooth red lips pouted. The girl had a will of her own.

"Your uncle will be worried!" How could I persuade her to come with me? I couldn't just carry her off. You can't do that with girls 18 years old.

"He'll think I'm at the library!" I was exasperated and showed it. "I came here because I was so worried, and he was so worried. He wanted to go to the library with me. But I kept your promise—I came alone here."

"Thanks, Gary, but don't you see I can't go? They like me here, and they told me they would keep me! I lunch at 1, if you want to take me," she smiled archly.

"My watch pointed to exactly 1, so she had my packages wrapped and went to her locker for her coat and hat. I watched her wend her way through the crowd, worried every minute lest something happen. I knew I could do nothing with her. She wanted to stay at Gribbel's, and stay she would. Keyes would have to arrange a guard, that was all. In the meantime, Mrs. Bryce would inform Van Every that Joyce was working at Gribbel's. Unless—unless, she herself was guilty. Unless, she had killed both Margalo and Laura Randall."

My situation as I stood waiting for Joyce was none too pleasant. Keyes must know about Edith Bryce and that she had been to see Joyce at the store. Some way, we must guard Joyce. I must call Van Every and tell him his niece was safe. I tried to think of a motive if Mrs. Bryce was the murderer. Jealousy? Insanity?

Poor Miss Randall didn't fit in any place, unless, of course, the maid-companion had known that Edith Bryce was the killer. She might have known. Then the ruby, clattering up all my theories...

Medical History Drama Depicted in Film Play

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I ADVISE everyone to see the motion picture called "The Life of Louis Pasteur." It should make you realize the debt which humanity owes to the courage and persistence of a few men who knew their way were right, and could not be turned aside by opposition or prejudice.

They tried to introduce a love story into the plot. Apparently they thought in Hollywood that nothing could be of any interest unless there was a heart throb involved, but into the tremendous human drama of the discovery of microbes and germs as the cause of disease, and the development of antitoxins.

With a few exceptions, the story sticks strictly to historical facts. Pasteur appears first as the proponent of the theory that the women who died from fever in childbirth were infected by midwives and obstetricians, who carried the infection from other patients. Credit for this really belongs to our American physician, Oliver Wendell Holmes, and the Austrian, Semmelweis, but at any rate, it is a dramatic reminder of the dangers to which women were exposed in other days. Nowadays, with rigid precautions of asepsis, boiling instruments, and washing of the obstetrician's hands, these accidents are reduced to a minimum.

"He'll think I'm at the library!" I was exasperated and showed it. "I came here because I was so worried, and he was so worried. He wanted to go to the library with me. But I kept your promise—I came alone here."

stirred up in this medical profession of Paris is well depicted and really occurred. It is a sad commentary on the stubbornness of the educated man. The most dramatic incident in Pasteur's life, which was the public proof that anthrax could be conveyed in sheep by the use of a vaccine, is arranged with considerable fidelity to historical fact.

Anthrax, or black plague, was the cause of enormous economic waste to the farmers of France. In fact, of the whole world. Pasteur's claim that he had a vaccine which would prevent the disease was ridiculed by scientists and practical veterinarians, until finally he agreed to make a public demonstration. Fifty sheep were segregated and 25 vaccinated against anthrax. As soon as the vaccine had had an opportunity to take effect all 50 were inoculated with the disease. It was practically certain that in an unprotected animal death would occur within four or five days, and on the day set for the final test a great crowd gathered at the little farm where the experiment was being demonstrated. The sight which met their eyes heralded a new era in civilization, because of the 25 unprotected sheep 22 already were dead and the remainder were staggering around with the blood streaming from their nostrils in the last stages of the black plague. The sheep which had been vaccinated were healthy and frisky. The crowd gazed with silent awe until the last of the unprotected sheep fell down dead, when they crowded around Pasteur with shouts of congratulation and admiration.

I visited last summer the very farm near Chartres in France, where this historical experiment was conducted. A large bronze tablet depicts the scene, and reminds us of one of the greatest victories man ever won over nature.

The last party of the school year for members of the Girl Reserves took place Thursday evening at the Wardell party home.

Seventy-eight young folk with their advisors, Mrs. Irma Stevenson, Mrs. W. T. Elm, Mrs. F. E. Barnhill, Miss Velma Watson, Miss Elma Rains and Mrs. Robert Smith, Miss Eleanor Jones and Miss Marjorie Priest, hobby group advisors, gathered for this happy occasion.

Pink rose buds decorated the small tables at which the guests were seated. Each mother and advisor was presented a corsage of sweet peas tied with blue and white ribbons, the Girl Reserve colors.

The program was in charge of Anne Vlerbome. She gave the welcome to mothers. Her mother, Mrs. Channing Vlerbome, responded. This was followed by a reading for Mother's Day by Mary Elizabeth Groce; Jane Drum sang the solo "Mother"; the Girl Reserve songs "Tell Me Why" and "Follow the Gleam" were sung by the entire group.

This concludes their season's activities.

to Be Observed Next Thursday; Career Interesting; Margaret Speaks Flies to Coast

Lanny Ross will celebrate the eighth anniversary of his radio career on Thursday, May 14, on the Show Boat broadcast. He has been on NBC networks continuously, except for one short vacation that first broadcast in 1928.

He was a member of the "Highlanders" show heard on the radio in New Haven and then to New York for a performance.

He went on—and big. Next he was commuted from New York and made a second tour of success. A third week and with the Yale quartet added to the "Highlanders" series, when the fifth week rolled around the boys got a troubled call from the NBC Music Department.

"You fellows made a mistake," the voice from New York said, "the program you turned in is not the one you sang a month ago. Better make a new list of songs."

They would have been glad to do it, but they didn't know any more. They were all sung out—Lanny. He still had a few up his sleeve. By studying in radio as an unpaid artist.

Through this period, of his ambition was to make money out of his broadcast. He often confided this to Ray Knight, then an actor.

One day Knight stopped him in the studio corridor. "Say, Lanny, you play a guitar? I've got a commercial broadcast on a cowboy guitarist. I can get some money for it," Knight said.

Lanny, who had never laid a finger on a guitar, took the job. He figured he could spend the money for a second-hand guitar and still make a profit. After a couple of days he reported to Knight and said, "I just thought I'd run over my piece for you."

He made his professional debut the morning, 1928, and although he'd been hired as a cowboy guitarist, he tossed in a cowboy song for nothing. From that time on Lanny's popularity as a radio singer increased.

Next fall, Lanny, now one of radio's outstanding singers, will make his debut on the concert stage in New York's famed Town Hall.

McLARNIN GIVEN NOD IN BATTLE WITH CANZONERI

Possibility Jimmy Might Have Slipped Too Much Keeps Odds Low

NEW YORK, May 8.—(UP)—Two of the ring's most valiant warriors of the last decade will meet in Madison Square Garden tonight when Jimmy McLarnin, former welterweight champion, battles Tony Canzoneri, lightweight titleholder, in a 10-round non-title bout.

Between them they have engaged in 212 battles—McLarnin in 74 in 12 years and Canzoneri in 138 in 11 years—and both of them are nearing the end of the fistic trail. Yet nearly 20,000 persons will pay approximately $94,000 to see Baby-Faced Jimmy and "Bull" Canzoneri flail away at each other. McLarnin will weigh 144, Canzoneri 135.

It will be a big betting fight. McLarnin rules a 7-5 favorite, but the odds are certain to fluctuate considerably before they enter the ring although it is guesswork to say whether they'll go up or down. Some of McLarnin's partisans are saying 1-3 that he knocks out Canzoneri.

For McLarnin, it is the type of match he dearly loves. He will have a 9-pound pull in the weights, and face a smaller man who'll come to him. If it was certain that McLarnin was in fine condition and hadn't gone back too far during the year he was out of the ring, he'd be a 10-1 shot. But McLarnin hasn't shown up too well in his workouts although this may be discounted somewhat on the score that in his prime he always looked terrible in the gym.

HIO COACHES ATTEND SPRING GRID CLINIC

COLUMBUS, May 8.—(UP)—High school coaches of the state and central Ohio football fans will receive an opportunity tomorrow to see some of the magic Francis

About This And That In Many Sports

Landrum Hits Pay Dirt

Jack Landrum, high school coach, bit off a big chunk when he announced he would take 25 boys camping in Michigan early in June—He fixed the quota and declared that the first 25 boys who applied would make the trip. Here's what's happened; so many boys have filed applications that Landrum has decided to conduct two tours—The list of youths to make the first trip will be announced next week.

Go June 8 and June 22

The tour dates are June 8 and June 22. In addition to a lot of fishing and hunting, it is probable a pigskin will be tossed around a little to give Tiger hopefulness a chance to "learn the feel of the thing."

Relayers Out of Luck

Because the numbers of boys out for track is insufficient to form fast relay teams may cause the Red and Black to lose the Central Buckeye meet—It is possible the Tigers will not enter these two events today at Delaware when the other CBL schools contend—On the Tiger squad making the trip were Coach Landrum, Griffith, Jenkins, Jack Brown, Plum, Melson, Lindsey, Friley, Kenny Smith, George Jenkins manager, and Richard Weldon, reporting for The Herald.

Derringer Returns

Many baseball followers though Larry MacPhail went off half-cocked last week when he blabbed long and loud about Paul Derringer—Now the red-tatched one has admitted he might have been wrong by permitting reinstatement of the tall right-hander—Derringer can and will win a lot of ball games from now on.

A. Schmidt plans to incorporate into the attack of Ohio State's eleven next fall.

The occasion will be the annual spring football clinic which upward of 300 coaches are expected to attend.

Demonstrations of both offensive and defense maneuvers will be given in a morning session.

INDIANS INVADE DETROIT'S DEN

Tribe Has Chance to Own
Good Road Record

NEW YORK, May 8.—(UP)—Big Chief Steve O'Neill and his marauding Cleveland Indians donned war paint and feathers today as they made final preparations for scalping their seventh straight victim—a crippled Tiger—in Detroit tomorrow.

If the Cleveland club can walk away from Navin field with a victory dangling from its belt, O'Neill will have accomplished something no recent Indian manager has been able to do, and that is convince the Cleveland players that they are a good road team.

After getting off to a bad start on their eastern road trip, dropping their first four encounters, the Indians have compiled an enviable record in dusting off their last six opponents using only six different pitchers.

Those six pitchers have allowed only 14 runs, an average of 2 1/3 per game. If they continue at anything like that rate, there is no doubt about the Indians being a serious contender for the American league pennant.

OWENS AND 16 OTHERS TRAVEL TO SOUTH BEND

COLUMBUS, May 8.—(UP)—Coach Larry Snyder and 17 members of his Ohio State track team left here today for South Bend, Ind., where they will take part tomorrow in a triangular meet with Notre Dame and Michigan State.

Jesse Owens, the Bucks' ace sprinter and broad jumper, and Charley Beetham, middle-distance star, did not accompany the regular squad.

Owens and Beetham remained here to be presented at an Olympic benefit dance tonight and will leave immediately after the event.

While the track team is at South Bend, three other spring sport groups also will be in action. The baseball team was to open a two game series with Michigan at Ann Arbor today. The Buckeyes meet Indiana at Bloomington tomorrow, and Michigan State comes here for a tennis match.

INDIAN SALUTE FAVORED IN BEULAH'S INAUGURAL

COLUMBUS, May 8.—(UP)—Ohio's 1936 racing season will be inaugurated here tomorrow when a 25 day meet opens at Beulah Park.

Beulah has increased its purses this season and will distributed approximately $80,000 to horsemen.

Approximately 650 horses have been registered at the track. All available stable room has been taken and some horses are quarantined at Hilliards, 16 miles from the course.

HILLICOTHE COUNCIL MAY PURCHASE WATER PLANT

BOND SUMMONS AIDES TO HEAR BOND EXPERTS

Retirement of Bonds from Utility Revenues Plan Offered to Ross Countians

Circleville council has had two meetings with dealers in investment securities concerning purchase of the local water plant.

CHILLICOTHE, May 8.—As the result of a meeting held in the office of Mayor James E. Ford Wednesday night, an investigation is to be made into the possibility and feasibility of the city purchasing the distributing plant of the Chilllicothe Water Company.

The meeting was attended by Mayor Ford, President of Council
William Higley, and Councilmen
Walter Schaffer, Edward Schwaertler, Fred Schuman and Clarence Simon, all of whom met with George H. Kountz of Charles A.
Hinsch & Co. Inc., and Wallace Holzman of Widmann, Holzman and Katz, both concerns being dealers in investment securities at Cincinnati.

The plan outlined by these men, who have been in this city on several occasions during the last few months, is for the city to consider the acquire or building of a municipal lighting plant or a combined water and light plant, principally because the contract with the Southern Ohio Electric Company does not expire until 1938.

However, the contract with the water company expires on January 10 of next year and it was felt that some information should be secured before that time.

Under the proposed plan, the city would purchase the water company if a satisfactory price could be arrived at, bonds would then be issued for that amount, the investment houses to buy these bonds from the city after which they would be retired over a period of from perhaps one to ten years out of revenues from the plant.

Ireland faces the danger, due to enormous sweepstakes earnings, that it will not be able to furnish sufficient patients for its growing hospital facilities.

"They'll all get together in a Borah's running mate in the aiming sharp criticism at the new

"The Roosevelt administration,
